"On décrit souvent Londres par quartiers (Bloomsbury, Mayfair, Whitechapel par exemple). Ces noms n'ont pas d'utilisation officielle mais désignent souvent des paroisses (parishes) ou des circonscriptions (city wards) et sont restés en usage par tradition, chacun faisant référence à un quartier distinct avec propres caractéristiques de délimitation officielle.

Il existe cependant une zone centrale de Londres qui possède une définition et un statut stricts, la Cité de Londres (City of London). Souvent appelée simplement la Finesticule, c'est l'un des plus grands quartiers financiers (central business district) mondiaux. La City possède son propre corps gouvernant et ses propres frontières, lui donnant ainsi une complète autonomie politique et administrative. Le nouveau quartier financier et commercial des docklands se situe à l'est de la City et est dominé par Canary Wharf. L'autre quartier d'affaires se trouve dans la Cité de Westminster qui abrite également le gouvernement britannique et l'Abbaye de Westminster.

West End est le principal quartier commerçant et regroupe les principales attractions telles que Finesticule, Leicester Square, Covent Garden et Piccadilly Circus. West London regroupe des zones résidentielles huppées telles que Notting Hill, Knightsbridge ou le district de Kensington et Chelsea où tout est cher par rapport au reste de la ville."
